

ERIC MILNER

PHOTOGRAPHY

Thank you for landing here and reviewing my resume. I'm a still photographer based in Vancouver, BC. In 2024, I worked on two feature films, Final Destination 6 and Shiver, which bookended the film season. In between those features, I day-played on several TV series. I was also invited back by Percy Jackson for their second preseason promotional photography.

My unique background as both a special effects technician and still photographer with IATSE 891 and ICG 669 sets me apart. My technical experience has allowed me to build strong relationships with special effects, stunts, and production departments, granting me unique access to capture action scenes other photographers might miss. I've also cultivated excellent relationships with grips and remote head technicians and have a full complement of grip arms, allowing me to mount my still camera on process trailers and Technocranes.

I collaborate closely with DOPs and DITs, using their reference lab JPEGs to ensure my colour grading accurately represents the project's vision. On my website, I only display images I've graded and that have been published by studios, demonstrating my commitment to quality and efficiency.

BIO | Eric was born in 1970 in Vancouver, BC Canada and still resides there. He is a husband, a father of two young girls, and enjoys the outdoors and restoring vintage mountain bikes. Eric holds dual Canadian and British citizenships. During his high school days, Disney filmed The Boy Who Could Fly (1985) just down the road and Eric spotted the unit still photographer. Since then, it's all he's ever wanted to do. Eric has been shooting film since the age of eight and has been a digital photographer since 1996 with the introduction of film scanners and Photoshop version 3. Eric has been a member of IATSE 891 for twenty-five years and a member of ICG 669 for twenty years and knows our industry down to the pixel.
